THE BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK .- "Coal Oil Johnny," says the Sioux City Journal, is the piagiarized pet name given a young soldier named Forrester, stationed at one of the upper forts. He recently fell heir to $25,000, and of the amount a remittance was made to him of $3,000. He got a furlough and went to Yaukton, where for the last three or four weeks he has been imitating to the best of his ability "Coal Oil Johnny," of Pennsylvania fame. He has been making it interesting for the boys, spending money for their benefit with a prodigal hand. He drinks but little himself, and is not known to have been intoxicated at any time, but he has no objection to his "friends" getting drunk as lords at his expense as often as their constitutions will permit. His delight is to drive a four-in hand and give everybody a ride, and he makes presents without number, and but a few days since sent a Yankton belle on the occasion of her birthday a $200 organ. Perhaps the best instance, however, of his disregard of lucre was shown when he bought a team, which struck his fancy, for $730, and two days later sold them to a Russian colonist for $130. His $3,000 is nearly gone, and when he has run through that he says he is going to settle down in Yankton, buy a livery stable, and become a prudent and decorous citizen. He is in the meantime hoping through the influence of his

INDIAN HUNTING. -The Indian method of hunting the deer and antelope seems to a looker-on, not heated by the chase, cruel sport. But food is the object of the Indian hunter, and he is wonderfully successful in securing it. Notwithstanding their great speed and bottom, these animals seldom escape their pursuers on the open prairie. Mounted on their swift ponies, the Indians become as it were a pack of hounds that run by sight. In all directions they move, searching the country with eyes that see everything. On discovering deer no attempt is made at concealment, but with bridle-rein between their teeth, loading their guns, or adjusting their arrows as they ride, the bunters bear down on the doomed animals. Off bound the run to the right-more Indians; to the leftstill Indians. The country, which at first seemed open, parrows to a small circle. The deer double on themselves. Hemmed in on every side, there is no escape; the bullet and the arrow do their work. All their hunting, whether of man or beast, involves a system of surrounding. It is this method, thoroughly are in at the death there is no dispute as to the distribution of the carcases. - Galaxy.

FOREST LAND IN GERMANY .- Few people have any clear idea of the extent of forest land in Germany, and most imagine that of the Black forest little is left except a tradition and a conventional blister of woodland so-named. In the contrary, in Hanover alone there are 900,000 acres of wood under State management; while nearly a fourth part of the area of l'russia is in forest, although haif of that is in private hands. As is well known, the forest administration in particular districts has long been famous, especially in Thuringia and the Hartz mountains. In North Germany generally the responsibilities are allotted in districts among a carefully organized body of officers presided over by a forest director. The appointments are fairly remunerated, and they are so eagerly sought after that candidates will remain on probation for years at their own cost, or with moderate and precarious pay, in the hope of securing a place in the corps at last. In Austria things are on a somewhat different footing. The Austrian forests are magnificent, -so magnificent, indeed, that the forest management has been neglected.

MARKS OF ADVERSITY.—"A Nelson-street dog," says the Danbury News, "noted for his admiration of hens, was on the walk in front of his office for a few minutes this morning, and attracted general attention. The animal will not weigh over eight pounds, and is probably not over two years old. But the vicissitudes of a neighbor's temper have told severely on his frame. Cobble-stones have made one leg perfectly worthless and transformed two others into valueless ornaments. Hot water has made him bald enough to supply a bair invigorator manufacturer with instructive and pleasant reflection for months at a time, while a marvelously-aimed coal-clinker has given to one of his eyes an expression that must not only scare a hen, but is well calculated to make a full-grown man feel a fresh interest in the near-

A BEAUTIFUL Rose.—About a year ago, says "Daily Rural Life," in the Rural New-Yorker, my gardener purchased from one of our large florists a dozen plants of a Countesse de Bertha rose, which have proved to be one of the best perpetual blooming sorts that I have seen. The flowers are of a deep pink color, quite large, double and elegant in form, and the fragrance is most exquisite, being entirely indescribable, but may be called a spiced sweetened tea. A bud cut off when it begins to open, and placed in a room, will perfume the entire atmosphere within, for one or two days. The plants are very vigorous, not being subject to mildew in the house, and they bloom almost continually; even small plants struck out from cutings bloom when only a few months old. We may have more showy varieties, but there are few that will take better than the Countesse

BEAR CHASE. - A gentleman walking out from the White Sulphur Springs last Sunday saw what he supposed to be some hogs feeding in a corn field. Upon approaching he discovered them to be bears. He was thereupon seized with the bear fever, and running with hat off, eyes wild and voice resounding, contiqued to yell for men, dogs, guns, &c, Two of our farmers, Charles Miller and Mr. Heslep oon got their rifles and dogs, and succeeded in killing three of the four after a chase of a few miles. The old bear escaped, as did the gentleman from the Springs. At last accounts were still running in opposite directions, making the speed of quarter-horses. Hogs in corn fields will ever be an object of suspicion hereafter to the visitors of our Springs, no doubt .- Montgomery Messenger.
